Workshop Content

Adolescent developmental tasks can contribute to assessment dilemmas over whether the adolescent's substance use is experimentation, abuse or dependence; and/or whether there is a co-occurring psychiatric and addiction problem. Similarly, an adolescent whose use has become problematic often presents more at the mandates of family, school or the legal system than from his or her concerns. This raises treatment dilemmas about how best to engage adolescents into treatment.

This workshop is designed to examine dilemmas in assessment and treatment for adolescents and identify strategies that can help build bridges between mental health and addiction treatment systems. Both fields have arisen from very different roots. This cultural clash accounts for the ongoing fragmentation that has been aggravated by different training, systems and funding. Clients and clinicians are separated by ideology and treatment orientations that do not serve well the dual diagnosis client.

The workshop will focus on how to better meet the needs of those using substances and exhibiting mental health problems. It will offer the common language of the Revised Second Edition of the ASAM Criteria, ASAM PPC-2R, which includes criteria for co-occurring mental and substance-related disorders to encourage more targeted service planning and documentation.
